Non-Executive Director Skills Course

Who:	BCKR founded by City of London lawyers, helps lawyers secure a portfolio career when they leave private practice.
Critical Issue:	BCKR requested I design and facilitate a non-executive director online course to add to their service offering.
Reasons:	To help their members to develop the skills and attributes either to make a successful transition into a non-executive portfolio career or simply to take up a non-executive director role during their legal career.
Capabilities Required:	BCKR needed a recognised leader in coaching and professional development with highly experienced behavioural skills and well versed in online group work, to help senior-level lawyers to successfully move to a new career with confidence.
What I provided:	I brought my business expertise, training skills and experience as a non-executive director and board advisor to help participants to review their career successes and translate them into the attitudes, mindset and communication behaviours to support them both in their search for their desired role and in their effectiveness once in their new role.
Results:	BCKR now have this course as part of their offering.
Participant Benefits:	See here for sample participant feedback.
